“ Greg Wes such a shining light as a child
We camped with the family for many years. Then life got in the way and we lost touch, but never the love for him and his siblings. Way to soon for him to be taken. Love and prayers for his family.

“ In Torrington WY between 1979 and 1981, two adult male explorers from Hamilton OH arrived and made a positive impact on hundreds of lives there, including me!

Legend has it that these men redefined what the wild wild west was for: that if you were brave enough and willing, you would experience an adventure worth waiting for!

Greg Whited and Bob Falk helped make our lives become part of that exciting adventure! You see, Don Kube and I were from La Crosse WI, and thought we were rough and tough enough 18 year olds to carve our own legendary status out west, but we were mistaken. Our college basketball teammate from that area, Tim Eisenbarth, shed some light on our adventure by inviting all of us to his family's farmstead, where we hunted and his father Herb yelling "Hell yeah Duke" to his trusted blue healer dog who jumped onto our beds while we were passed out in the early morning hours, to get us moving for that morning's hunt, and his mother Lorraine who would cook that game and other wonderful food for us! Truly, Greg and Bob magnified our enjoyment in Wyoming! Another 18 year old basketball teammate, Brian "The Big O" Onken from the Chicago area, also brought his wild west inspirations and quickly we all became a group of men that were mentored into more than just college basketball players, Greg and Bob motivated us to become alpha men, which we are all still today! Thank you Greg and Bob, and your families and friends from Ohio, for allowing us to share 2 years of outstanding life with these two urban legends! Greg, we will see you in heaven soon enough, and thank You God for all of Your great blessings in life on this planet!

“ A gentleman with the kindness to match! I watched and learned how he handled people in my time with him at FHS in Athletics. He taught me a lot about life and we shared our faith always. I will see you again my Friend!
