“ He still had the first motorcycle he ever got as a teenager and we used to ride it to Cincinnati and get a few bolts at a time chromed because we were teens with our first jobs. His mom got mad when he painted a part for it and cooked it in her kitchen oven. She chased him out of the house and we were laughing so hard. We would swim in the pool and then ride that bike all over. He worked 3 jobs as a senior in high school. He wasn't afraid of work and was super thrifty with a heart as big as all get out. He would give you the moon as long as you were trying. This man loved his children (actually loved all children). He was a good soul. My friend (always) and father of my sons , we have soooo many happy stories, Thank you for the Memories.

I remember motorcycle part baking day like it was yesterday. Jim told me not to tell Mom. Didn't need to... The whole house smelled terrible for days.
