“ Every Christmas, Patrice and I, along with a couple of other cousins, were partners in mischief. We would carefully mark the big stairs as to safe spots where you could step without making noise. We would grab flashlights and meet up after the adults went to bed. We would carefully sneak down all of the stairs as a group and make a midnight raid on Grandma's Christmas cookies. Patrice usually led the raid down the stairs. It was always the highlight of my Christmases!
